

International Scientific Conference
Migrations in the Slavic Cultural Space

Ima seoba. Smrti nema!

The Department of Slavic Philology at the University of Łódź and the Institute of History in Belgrade are delighted to invite you to participate in the International Scientific Conference entitled ‘Migrations in the Slavic cultural space’, which will be held on 6 May 2022.

Migrations are an integral element of human life as well as a topic of research for many scholars representing various scientific disciplines. This state of affairs is hardly surprising, as this phenomenon has a decisive impact on the cultural transformations taking place in the world around us. This situation is no different across the vast expanse of the Slavic world, where the consequences of migration are visible on various levels of socio-cultural life. However, this issue is yet to be fully explored. The aim of this conference is to examine the multifaceted cultural changes occurring as a result of migration, especially in the area of Slavic literature, arts, linguistic interference, social relations, etc. Therefore, it will be relevant to look at these issues from a broader interdisciplinary perspective, without ignoring individual experiences, which will undoubtedly facilitate a better assessment of the implications of the journeys undertaken by the Slavs at various levels throughout history.

Considering the vast array of possible themes that may be proposed by the speakers, the organisers suggest focusing on the following:

1. Migrations and Slavic multiculturalism
2. Memory of migration, migrations of memory
3. Literature of emigration and literary relations
4. Processes of Slav assimilation
5. Issues of identity and self-identification in a post-immigration reality
6. Ethnic and confessional conflicts arising from migration
7. Slavic diasporas
8. Current trends in research on migration
9. Travel accounts and memoirs
10. Slavic cultural transgressions
11. Digitisation of migration certificates
