CALL FOR PAPERS

IV INTERNATIONAL INTERDISCIPLINARY ACADEMIC CONFERENCE

Human beings and the challenges of the contemporary world

We invite researchers and PhD students to apply to participate in PUNO's IV International Interdisciplinary Academic Conference.

Proposed research areas include:

- political challenges (conflicts, local and international disputes, social problems);
- economic and social challenges (inflation, economic sanctions, unemployment, domestic violence, pension systems, fluctuations in international trade, energy crisis, challenges for business, remote and hybrid work, crisis management);
- psychological challenges of modernity (psychological help for war refugees, how to talk to children about war, depression and fears after the pandemic, the impact of isolation on group work);
- humanities and the challenges of modernity (diagnoses and forecasts included in literature, film, visual arts, music);
- the challenges of multiculturalism (integration, multicultural family, diversity of religions);
- the family and the challenges of today (the family in the face of military conflict, broken families, the experience of border situations by families);
- school and contemporary challenges (remote and hybrid learning, the impact of isolation on students, education for children of war refugees, the impact of remote education on the motor skills of the youngest students);
- suffering and war in the contemporary world (crisis of humanity, war crimes in the twenty-first century, attitudes towards refugees, charitable organizations);
- the health care system in the post-pandemic world (management and planning strategies, staff shortages, delays in the treatment process, ethical challenges);
